Re: Choice of Work

I choose my essay, "The World According to J.Alfred Prufrock," because I believe it is one of my stronger papers written at Texas Wesleyan University. T.S. Eliot was first introduced to me as a student by Dr. McMurray in American Literature. Eliot is the epitome of the modern society and J.Alfred Prufrock was the man who represented the alienated individual in the new world after the devastation of World War II. The poem struck me funny with its quick wit and perspective so I decided to go a step further and write my final paper regarding Prufrock's vision of the world.

This paper helped me to realize that a well-written paper will always be in need of revisions. In the original version, my use of tense was cringing to say the least. Verb tense has always been of weakness of mine; however, this paper truly exemplified just how much of a problem it really has been for me. With the help of Dr. Neeley's Advanced Grammar class and a few Academic Success Team tutorials, I believe I have come a long way with the struggle. This paper was indeed a good practice for me. I hope you all enjoy this piece as much as I have.
